

L'Italia in autostop, due neozelandesi a Palse Italy hitch, two New Zealanders in Palse

PORCIA The community of Palse has opened the door to two tourists exceptional, from the other side of the globe. A couple of friends and originating twenties students of New Zealand, made a stop in the village of Porcia, the other night, before embarking on a long journey to Italy by hitchhiking. Their presence, in the neighborhood where everyone knows everyone else, did not go unnoticed: to do the honors could not be that the committee "The memory of Palse Palse-in" memory, used to house the villagers emigrated each time returning to visit to the community. This time, the ties with the homeland have nothing to do: the two tourists, landed at Treviso airport, reached Porcia for a night refreshment. They hitchhiked from Conegliano to the exit highway, not far from Palse: seeing the tower lit up in the night, they headed toward the center of the hamlet. "We crossed them out by a preparatory meeting of the festivities for July Palsese - explain the committee -. A chat, two photos, beer and pizza kindly provided by the owner of Pizzeria New Bar, Livio Menegatti. " In the image that we publish the boys, after tasting one of the typical dishes of our tradition, displaying with pride and with a smile the flag of their homeland. But who are the two New Zealand friends? Jeff Jones, a native of Wellington (capital of New Zealand) is a student of computer photography enthusiast who delights in being a photographer for ceremonies, and while Caleb Coffrey, coming from a country north of the capital, he studied economics and finance. "They will shoot Italy hitchhiked for two months. They were headed in Palmanova, while subsequent stages will be Venice, Rome and then return. " In the face of the greatest danger perception than a few years ago, especially in light of recent attacks that shook Europe, it is admirable that there are young people ready to leave their country, backpacking, to accomplish an experience travel of this kind, with the purpose (in the case of two New Zealand) to visit Italy hitch, with all the difficulties and risks involved.
